About me

My first interaction with fashion was when my sister bought me a mini fashion kit from Indigo bookstore for my 10th birthday. There was outlined model and accessory booklets from that kit, and that's when I first started designing my first garments that I would want to wear on a red carpet. I've studied Fine Arts for post-secondary, and I knew something was missing in my life and that's when I transferred to a fashion school. As I grew up, social media was already everyone's daily life. Influencers always gave me so much inspiration and the thrill of loving new fashion pieces. Aimee Song and Bretman Rock were my major icons and I learned so much from them for fashion and make-up. They gave me courage and self-confidence, and my goal was always to give people who follows me the same experience I had with my icons.
