Fragile, cheerful and cautious

I forgot to put my feet down and I feel better

How good it feels when you find your peace...You know? I have realized what could be the missing part of the puzzle, everything gets better once you learn from your experiences. Your happiness and inner peace cannot depend on what the other people think of you, sees of you, because you are not able to control the heartbit of someone else and you shouldn't even bother... The feeling that hurts your head so bad when this happens will still be there, but I'll be in peace. I can live because I've felt and loved the better I could. With all my heart. With all my body...

I imagine myself in a place where the most important things in life are valued as they should and I can see myself as a three year old child, dancing in the livingroom with my family and I come to a conclusion. Once everyone pretends you to be something you are not, you can only go back to the origin to remind you who you finally are
