Zero Zone is a cultural elements meditation center which located in Fukuoka, Japan, it aim to provide a space for both visitors and the living people in this city for them to meditate themselves. This center is separate in totally three space and this project focused on one of them--the healing space. Zero zone want to bring the traditional Japan culture element into the space to provide a different meditation feeling to the customers who come.

Site Analysis

About Fukuoka

Fukuoka is the capital city of Fukuoka Prefecture, situated on the northern shore of the Japanese island of Kyushu. It is the most populous city on the island. Fukuoka is the economic center of the Kyushu region, with an economy largely focused on the service sector. It is also the largest startup city in Japan, and is the only economic zone for startups. Which means at the same time Fukuoka will have a lot visitors as well.

Site Plan & Outline

The site is near the city centre with convenience on traffic route but located in one of the parks in the city, the special location leads to its benefits on sound proof, which will be helpful on the meditation centre.

- 10000 square meter total
- 30% maximum ground cover
- 16 meters height restriction
- 10 meters set back on both side

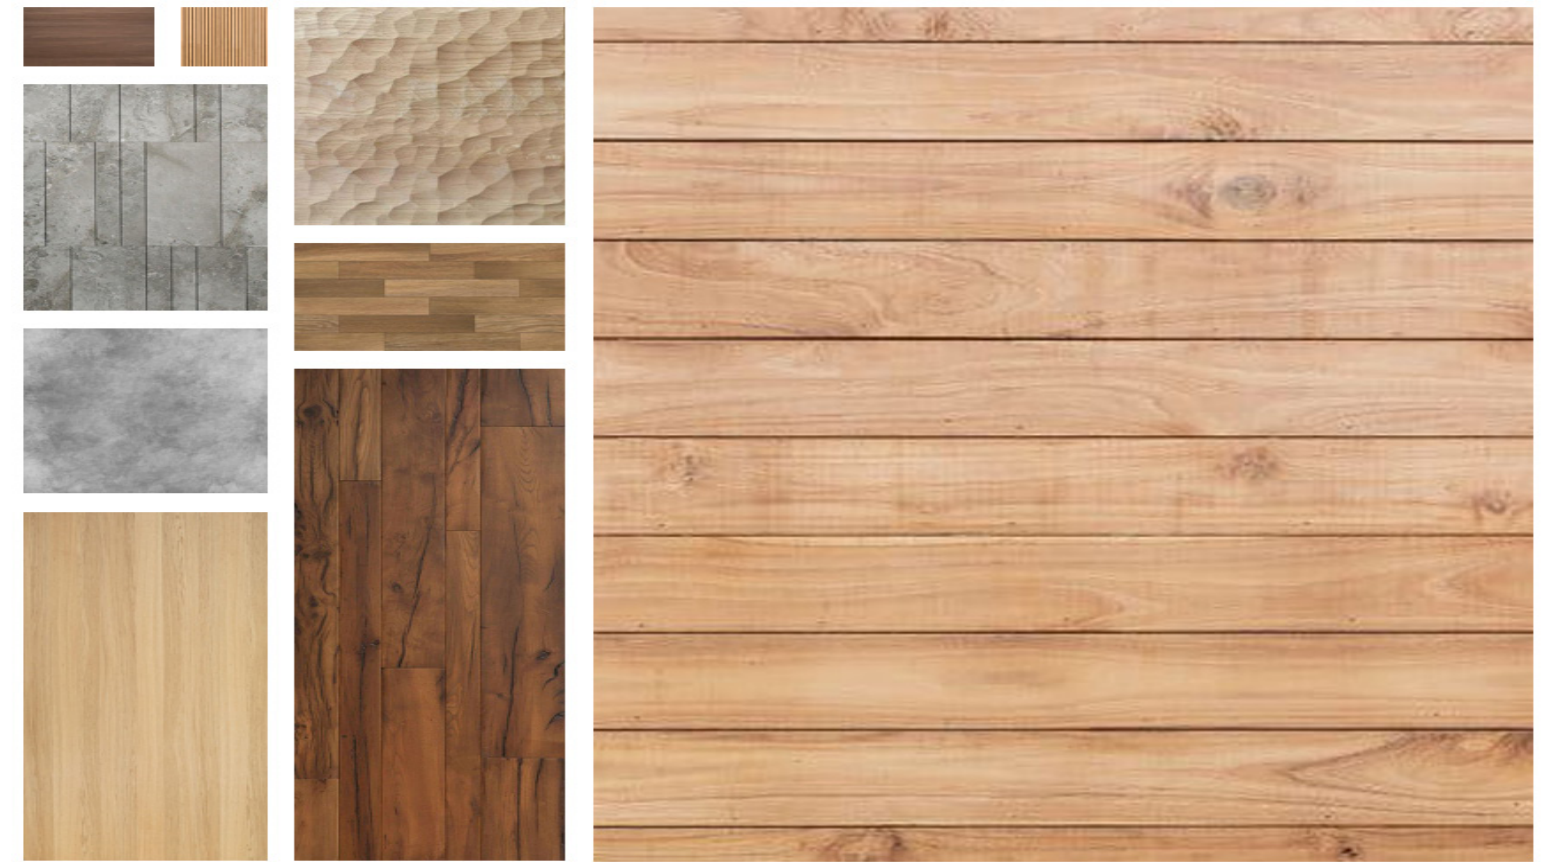

Mood Board

During the high pace normal life, within the busy city center area. I want to design for the special meditation center that reflect to the culture elements and able to provided a place for people to relax themselves in.

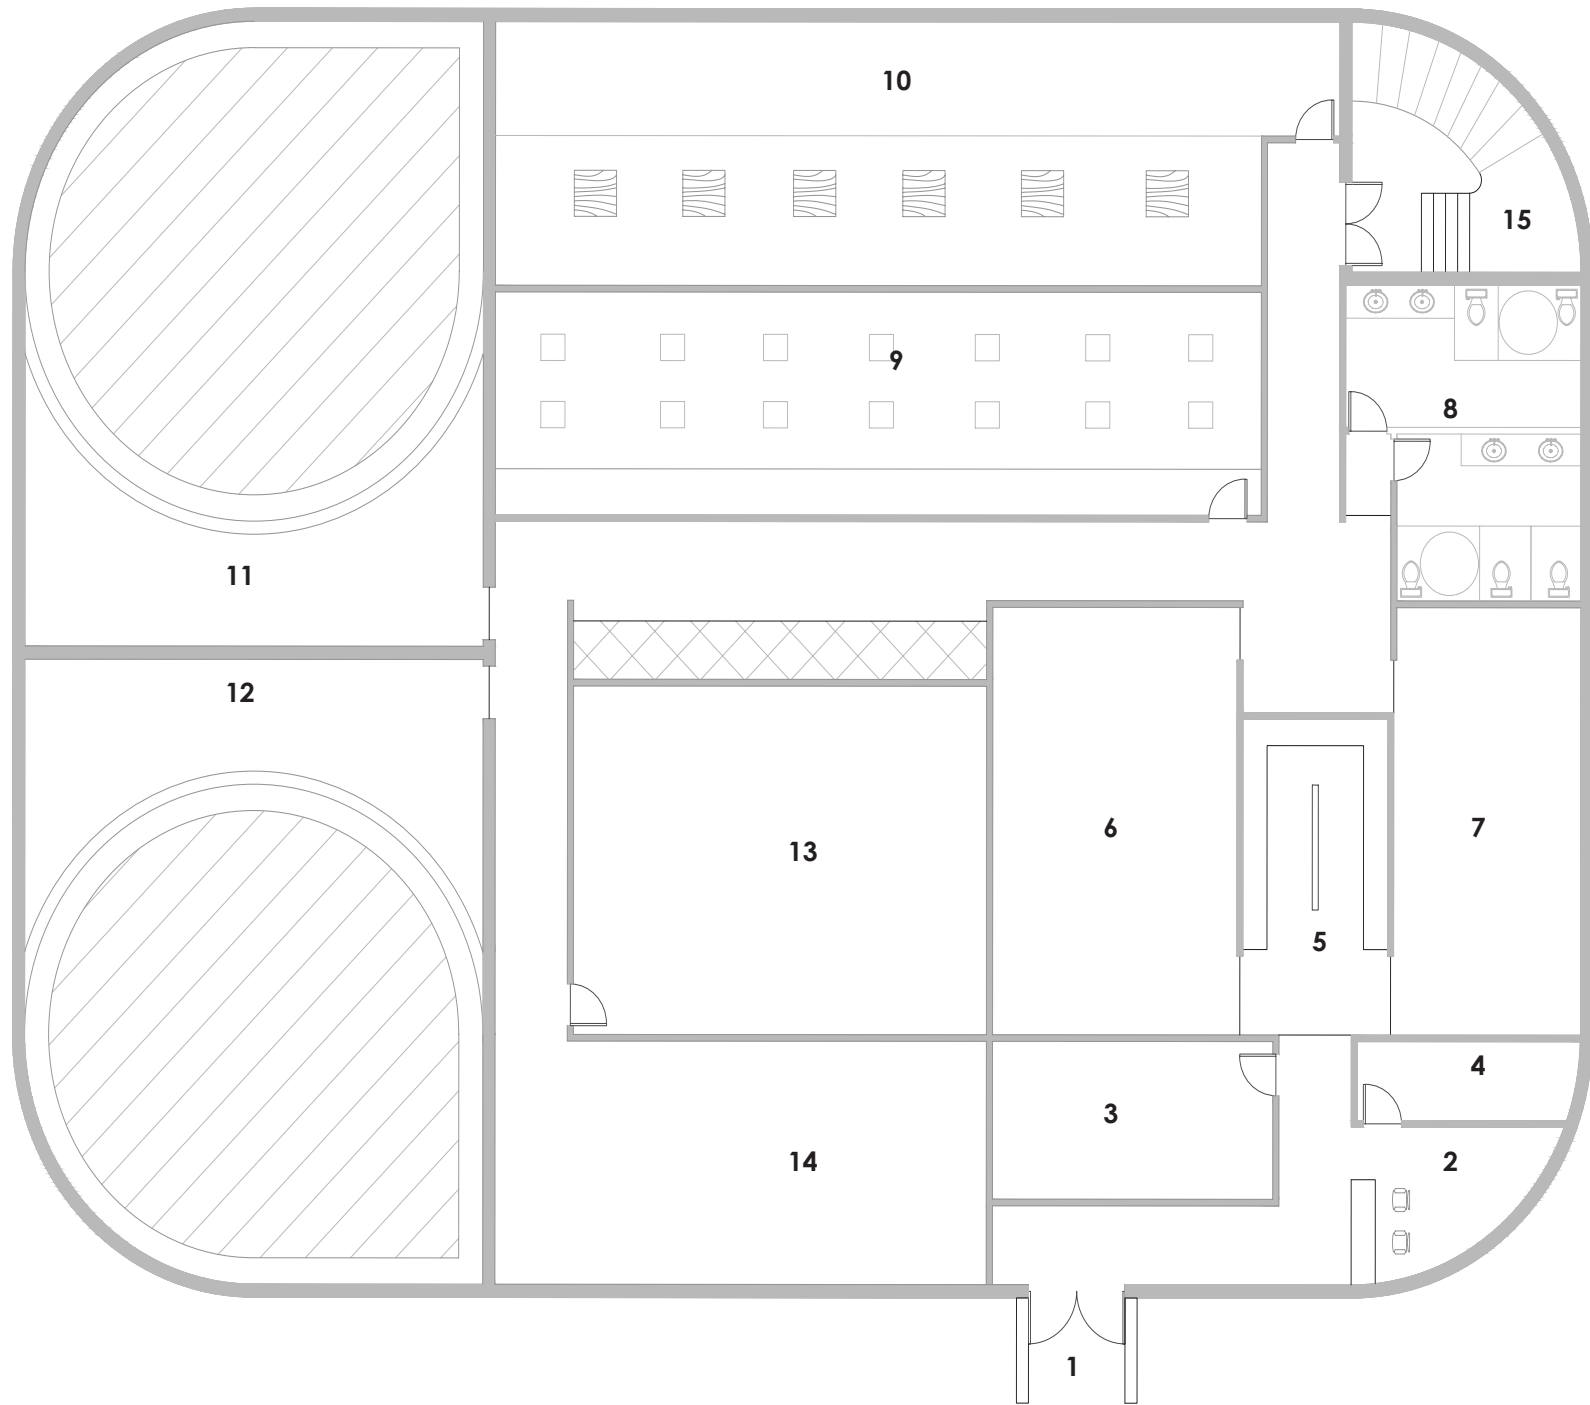

The Tea element and Spring element will contains in the building itself, which both of them aim on slow people down and think on spiritual area and leaving the daily busy. The nature material as wood and bamboo will highly using in the building. And the light changing will be provided to provided a better atmosphere in the building.

Material Board

Wood material will be the main using through the whole space in order to provide more natural and calm environment for the people who come for meditating, at the same time, it will more close to the Japanese cultural on traditional buildings. At the same time, stone surface will be using several times in order to enhanced the differences into the space and give more calm feeling to the customers.
