

Fashion Decades

Many say don't dwell on your past and don't worry too much about your future; just focus on your present. When it comes to fashion, it is a completely different ball game. In order for fashion gurus to predict the new trend focusing on the past and the future is what will make the industry to succeed. Through past generations (50s, 60s, 70s, 80s, 90s) styles have transformed. Attitudes have transformed as well through many generations. Fashion provides a great impact on our way of living. Fashion is not just a piece of clothing we place on our backs. Fashion is an art to express our personality and our interests; and as well make a great impact on first impressions. As a society, different opinions from different generations are set out in the public concerning if today's fashion has caused an inappropriate guise for the public.

Fashion is a circle

Most upcoming trends are carefully chosen. Fashion marketers in order to predict how the future consumers will be satisfied, marketers encounter the most celebrated craze in history to bring back to life. Many styles have been in style for decades and many people have adored them. For example: Leather jackets have been worn since the 1900s has flight jackets worn by aviators. In the 21st century, leather jackets are known to be used for the famous fall trend. Not only fashion can furnish new looks, fashion does have a reputation for duplicating our history. This not only applies towards Fashion, even in Music where many well known artists decide to select a great hit from the past and remix it. Many seem to enjoy bringing back good memories of history and fashion society. The generation (mostly Y generation) who couldn't be informed. Now, the core question is: Why do certain ideology in fashion, if most of our fashion presents the past?

A bit of change won't hurt: We all have been through it.

Through days, weeks, months, years and decades our world has developed, modernized and became more updated. Our world has been through tragedies such as wars, genocide, disagreements between cultures and many more. Our world has been through memorable moments such as the Beatles, countries coming together, peace agreements, Dalai Lama and many more. Our world has been through quite a rollercoaster ride. Through changes in our world, people who are on this Earth have changed as well. Since the world is becoming more modernized due to being over industrialized many people should begin to be more open minded. Every generation something new comes up not only in fashion but also in music and even in technology. When new "stuff" is being introduced to the society, it shouldn't be neglected. People should be more opening minded. Even though the effect seems unfamiliar everything deserves a chance in order to be shown and hopefully be the main talk. Many people use this line too often: "Oh in my days we didn't have this and this ... Kids are spoiled these days." That line shouldn't even be mentioned the correct line would be "I'm so grateful we have this, this, and this. We are becoming more intelligent each day." All types of generations should appreciate the creative thoughts that are put in when hardworking fashion gurus are working at their very best. Many fashion gurus such as Michael Kors are not under the Y Generation however he is still able to design clothes for the 21st century and satisfy a big number of people. This is an example of being open minded if that one person can do it that means it is possible.

Final Fashion Statement:

People in this world should discontinue to compare how they're generations were better than today's generations. Many of us should be able to adapt in today's culture such as fashion. Fashion has been respected and has been the main talk every year. Everybody has a different style which comes with different personalities. Some love the 50s sophisticated with pearl necklace look and some love 80s look big hair and disco pants. Even though we all have different looks does not mean will have to have the need to insult other styles no matter what generation we're in. Fashion has been opening minded and have brought past trends back in the fashion industry for people to not throw away their style and for many to be aware of different styles. Fashion allows people to express themselves by displaying numerous types of clothing. Now it's the people's turn to accept the variety of styles and new trends without the excuse of the Generation Gap.

When a person can not accept their style (the way they portray themselves), it's the same meaning of not accepting the person. There are different forms of art techniques, cultures, technology and fashion don't make that judge a person's maturity level. 📖
