Bright, shiny, reflections are some of the characteristics that appears in this Fall 2016 season for Casual Menswear.

This season, outerweares are composed of mirror like metallic for materials, as well as more somber, neutral colors. With the influence of Rave music and new technology, the appearances of futuristic materials and fabrics are made available to finish products such as bomber jackets, coats, and suit jackets to be worn casually over a tshirts and trousers.

Along side metallics finishing on men's outerwear, this fall

2016 season features the return of the puffer jackets, inspirations from the military, fur, variations on red and bondage details. As well as duffle coats are seen worn for this seasons.

If you happen to live in a four-season climate, October is awesome for many reasons. It's the time of year when leaves change, apple orchards open, and pumpkin takes over everything (especially, and gloriously, pie). It's also the time of year when stylish guys prints that have appeared show after show. Whether you are a true-blue follower of animal prints or your mathematically inclined mind re-

2017 print trends have them all in spades. Having been rummaging through the recent fashion shows we are smoothly passing from the fall 2016 color trends to the main prints and patterns of the season that have caught our attention and are definitely worth being discussed with vim and vigor.

Take it as granted to see all kinds of plaids and checked patterns whenever fall/winter fashion weeks kick-start, whether in vibrant or muted shades. They are able to work magic when it is to work out a serious businesswoman visage and equally functional when a laid-back playful image is on the agenda. Plaids and checks have never been so exuberant as throughout the fall/winter 2016-2017 fashion weeks both in terms of colors and sizes. classic and noble check type so widely used among kings, princes and presidents both in the past.

It's no secret that tailoring has leaned punchy the past few seasons. We're over #menswear, thank god, but now that suits are, for many men, a choice and not a requirement, they want to experiment. This season, they're the easiest way into AW16's key pattern, the check. Although there are a couple of points to keep a (double) breast of.

First, no top-to-toe tartan or retina-burningly bold colour combos. Leave hot pink on cyan window-pane checks to those who roam Pitti's square, and look instead to its architecture: cement suits with off-white checks, or tonal blues that stick nearer navy than sky.'

This is also a look that favours slim-mer men; patterns naturally add bulk to frames, so beware if you packed up your beach body with your summer wardrobe. When seasonal fashion weeks come to end, we start diving into the most stylish solutions of the leading fashion designers just to breathe freely again that there will not be any lack of come-hither looks. The upcoming fall/winter seasons have much to offer starting from enlivening colors and creative cutouts to eclectic

PULLS

We've been preaching the utility of the turtleneck for a couple of years now, and it looks like they're not going anywhere. Turtlenecks of the chunky woven variety, looser fits, and even under two- and three-piece suits, all made a very strong showing.

The most prominent colors for shirts seen in this Fall 2016 season are red, burgundy, green, blue, or anything that allows for a contrast.

A turtleneck is a very easy piece to start practicing layering techniques with. It's simple, stylish and always looks sophisticated. Ideally, you'll have two in your wardrobe - one in a lightweight merino wool and another that's a bit more chunky.

We've become accustomed to various layering techniques in both menswear and womenswear. It also was the first time we've seen silk neckwear layered under turtlenecks. A scarf under a turtleneck, under a waist-coat, under an overcoat - the turducken of menswears.

Similar to the monochromatic trend, the outfit in the photo above works because of the similar colors that bring the look together.

While the current rollneck revival shows no sign of stopping, next season these will morph into funnel or slightly lower mock turtlenecks (that's a rollneck without the roll) in either zip-up or slip-over form.

Slide one under your new slouchy coat with jeans for max effect.'

We've become accustomed to various layering techniques in both menswear and womenswear, but the Joseph Abboud runway was full of many new variations. It also was the first time we've seen silk neckwear layered under turtlenecks. A scarf under a turtleneck, under a waist-coat, under an overcoat - the turducken of menswear?

We've said it before and we'll say it again:

there's nothing sharper in the fall or winter than the addition of some rich jewel tones.

A pop of color needn't be jarring. Deeper, richer hues present a more luxe and sophisticated appearances.
