About Me

'An interior designer who doesn't want to be a painter is not a good explorer.'

I like to travel. What travel brings to me is not only beautiful scenery but also the diverse humanities. What brings me more is the endless design inspiration for different adventures. Explore the arrogance of minimalist architecture on the tundra of Iceland; Discover the luxury of the cumbersome lines of the Middle Ages on the British land; Understand the architecture and landscapes in the Suzhou gardens, and sigh the red and white collisions in front of the Potala Palace.

I found inspiration in my adventures and used them in my designs to create a changing and blending style. My heart has been travelling around the world, and my design is also.

CONCEPT

The nest is more than just a place to read. It is more like a community center to help people get close to each other. The concept of nest is a paradise in the forest, a forest castle far from the hustle and bustle of the city, where people can enjoy the pleasure of reading and learning. There are three layers in the nest so that you can use the space reasonably and distinguish between different levels of learning and reading. The first floor is both an entrance and a place for children to play leisurely; the second floor is a quiet seating area where people can lie on the sofa to soak up the sun; the third floor is a study area with absolute silence at the top of the building.
