ARTISAN

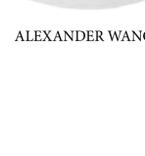

Radical Rustic intense volume and texture drive the look and feel of this statement-making quilted skirt and brocade jacket. Cinched in at the waist with an oversized belt, the silhouette is overtly feminine, finished with quirky mismatched shoes and a vintage

OVERSIZED CHIC

Low temperatures call for wrapped up, cosy styling. Quilted fabrics and heavy wool in fogged greens sit with delicate flowing chiffons in softest lavender and barely-there pink and cream. This story is influenced by life at sea with long naval uniform-inspired outerwear and tailoring. Dark water greys sit with sky blue and lime khaki, while soft pink putty tones neutralise.

OFFBEAT

DOLLYPOP

Silhouettes draw inspiration from 1960s glamours and dollhouse playfulness. Strawberry-shake tones are teamed with berry, lemon and lime add zing. This story plays with the scale of classic retro pieces. Geometric shapes sit in a pale primary and secondary colour palette for a sporty feel with a masculine undertone.

STYLE TIP

Retro is back! Flared pants, wide crop tops and cute ankle boots. Add in some bright pinks and big jewels and you're in!

CANADIAN FEATURE

Greta Constantine is an accessible luxury line of ready-to-wear women's wear based in Toronto, Canada. Designers Kirk Pickersgill and Stephen Wong, considered the "jersey boys of Toronto," have rapidly accumulated a clientele comprised of international socialites and celebrities alike since starting their label in 2006. The name itself is derived from the combination of the name of Stephen's mother, Greta, with that of Kirk's grandfather, Constantine. The pair works together in their Toronto area studio conceptualizing, exploring, and challenging the fashions of today for the women of tomorrow.

Designers Kirk Pickersgill and Stephen Wong met in Toronto and became fast friends. Sensing that the current state of Canadian fashion was in decline, they sought to pursue their lifelong dreams of starting their own label. Kirk, a stylist by trade based in Milan, Italy, has worked for international designers such as Dsquared2 and Neil Barrett. He has used his wealth of experience to fulfill his role as a guest teacher at the renowned Istituto Marangoni in Milan. Stephen began his career as a costume designer in Toronto for Susan Dicks & Co. and has designed clothing for several films such as The Last Day of Disco, American Psycho, Glitter, Chicago, and Hairspray.

The Greta Constantine collection appeals to the sleek, worldly, empowered and sophisticated woman and offers clothes with a modern sensibility for truly effortless dressing. Some of their A-list clientele include: Jennifer Hudson, Angelina Jolie, Hilary Duff to Coco Rocha.
